Dr. A. G. Wehrli Tells Students About Prophet

Professor of Theological School Gives Address on Amos in The College Auditorium, June 10.

Dr. Allen G. Wehrli, head of the Department of the Old Testament, of Eton Theological Seminary, of St. Louis, spoke in the Auditorium, Monday, at the 10:40 period, on the subject "Sins of Civilization."

His discussion was based on the Book of Amos, from which he drew parallels in modern civilization. Dr. Wehrli told how Amos, with an insight which saw that which was hidden from others, foresaw the downfall of Israel's civilization, due to its corrupt social practices. He showed the great skill and ingenuity of a prophet in his approach to the Israelites, and his masterful style and delivery in address.

In portraying the personality of Amos, the speaker brought out the strength of a character which could lift a man from the humblest class in a rigid cast system, into the delivery of a great word embracing message. Dr. Wehrli continued with the character portrayal by picturing the background of the prophet. He said that Amos was a herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore trees.

These two occupations necessitated travel, as the sycamore tree did not grow in the vicinity of the grazing lands. In his travels he became acquainted with the large cities of Israel, and their unjust social practices.

At this point Dr. Wehrli brought out the difference between the Oriental's method of thinking, and the method of the modern Westerner. He said that the Oriental had no mountain of generalities to bewilder him, but stayed close to the level of facts, and followed a clear and definite procedure in his thinking.

The speaker then told of the visions which appeared to Amos, upon his return from the cities. In one of his visions he saw Jehovah preparing a great plague of locusts, which in that day when methods of combating such evils were unknown, was indeed a curse. The prophet interpreted this vision as the imminent downfall of Israel. In another vision he saw a great fire consuming the world.

At first Amos tried to put away the visions that were troubling him, but after a period of struggle, he finally entered into active campaign against the evils of the day.

The call of God sent him north to the part of Israel over which Jeroboam ruled. There he proclaimed Israel's coming destruction. Dr. Wehrli compared the mission of Amos to that of the modern critic whose business it is to denounce the evil without suggesting the remedy. He was master of style, and his appeals were always short, powerful, and poetic in quality.

The speaker went on to describe the appearance of Amos at either Bethel or Samaria, both populous cities of Israel, where he spoke in the great central sanctuary of the city. He pictured Amos in his herdsman's clothes, addressing that great, milling, restless group, whose attention was held only by the oratorical powers of the speaker.

He approached them by proclaiming the coming destruction of the hated neighbor, Syria. Next he reminded them of the sins of Moab against Edom, working up to a climax, at which he condemned the sins of Israel.

Dr. Wehrli concluded by calling attention to the rhythmic quality of the book, of Amos which can be scanned and the beats recognized as in poetry.

Administration Body of School Meets June 11

Few Changes Are Made in Routine of College. Board of Regents Re-elect Officers and Faculty.

Re-election of the faculty, authorization of the establishment of a kindergarten and re-election of officers comprised the important business transacted by the board of regents of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College June 10. All the members of the board were present except B. G. Voorhees, St. Joseph; Chas. A. Lee, state superintendent of schools who is an ex-officio member, and Miss Laura Schmitz, Chillicothe.

Dr. Jesse Miller of Maryville, who recently was re-appointed to the board by Governor Henry S. Caulfield, was re-elected president of the board of regents. Mr. Voorhees was re-elected vice-president and W. A. Rickenbrode, business manager of the College, was re-elected secretary.

The board recessed until July 1 when bids will be received for the College depository and at this time the treasurer of the College will be named V. E. Bird is the present treasurer.

The board of regents authorized President Uel W. Lamkin to establish a kindergarten at the College here, effective September 1. President Lamkin announced that Miss Chloe Millikan will be in charge of the kindergarten.

Establishment of this department at the College is the first step taken by the institution in pre-school education. Later announcements will be made as to whom may be admitted and how applications may be made for enrollment in the kindergarten.

For this year, Mr. Lamkin said that the pupils admitted will have to be 5 years old by January 1, 1930.

With the re-election of the College faculty President Lamkin announced the new members of the faculty who have been elected.

V. A. Newcomb, who had been elected for the summer term, was elected by the regents for a permanent instructor in the commerce department. He will teach class in bookkeeping and accounting and other courses.

E. W. Mounce, recently admitted to the bar of the state, who will go to the University of Chicago the last half of the summer term to complete work on an L. L. B. degree, has been made chairman of the commerce department. He succeeds L. M. Eek, formerly of the College.

Group Gives Shower for Miss Mary Keith

Miss Keith, who has recently moved to one of the apartments in the new Geist apartment house, "Bon Air," was given a kitchen shower by a group of her friends, Monday evening. The entertainment of the evening was provided by Miss Blanchan and Miss Malda Taylor, who gave the group a picnic and a delightful picnic supper in College park.

A remarkable thing about the shower was that without consultation on the part of the givers, there was no duplication of gifts. The articles presented to Miss Keith included among others a tea-kettle, a percolator, a cream-whip, an egg-beater, a paring knife, a dish-pan, dish-cloths, a dish-mop, a "chore-girl," a clothes-line, and many other articles of kitchen equipment.

After the picnic, the group went down to inspect the apartment and to spend the evening with Miss Keith and Miss Oriswell, who is this summer sharing the apartment.

Those present were: Misses Blanchan, Taylor, DeLuce, Dow, Bowman, Fisher, Dykes, Martindale, Schulze, Goodheart, Smith, Keith, and Oriswell.

Library Rules Are Announced By Mr. Wells

Regulations for Use of Library by All Students Are Made for Summer Term of College.

Mr. Wells, librarian, announces some important library regulations which should be observed by all students in school this summer.

The library will open on school days from half past six o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night. On Saturdays it will be open from eight o'clock in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon.

The east side of the library should be used only by students who are using library books. Students using their regular text books should study in the west side of the library. Reference books for certain classes will be placed on the gallery although any of the students may study there.

Books which are not on reserve may be checked out of the library. Books on reserve should be used in the east side of the library and should be returned to the charging desk. Students should never return books to the shelves.

Students leaving the east side and entering west side of library should show books to the librarian at the desk as each student must sign for the library books taken out of the east side.

Various publishing companies have books on display in the small room back of the library. In the same room there are many books for sale by the College. Students may look at these books any time. Ask the librarian about these books.

Magazines may be checked out of library for home reading. A student should not ask for more than one magazine at a time. County papers should be returned to the proper boxes and not left on the tables.

Noise in the library is unnecessary. Rubber matting will soon be placed on the steps leading into the library and students who develop library manners will help make the room one of study. A chute has been placed in the door just outside the library and students will find this convenient to use when returning books, especially if the library is closed or they do not need other reference books.

If books are not returned by eight o'clock on the date they are due, a charge of twenty-five cents for each day over due will be made against the student. This fee will be taken from the book deposit. No fines are collected in the library. All students should watch the list posted at various times on the bulletin board and see

The 1929 "Towers" Make Their Appearance

The 1929 "Tower" the annual publication of the Junior class was introduced to the student body May 24.

In previous years the administration has sent the Towers to the high schools of this district. The students of different schools are interested in the College and enjoy seeing the "Tower." It is probable that if there are any "Towers" left after the students of the College are supplied that the same plan will be carried out this year.

The annual is one of the best that

Daily Paper Prints May Fete Pictures

Two photographs of the May Fete, recently held at the State Teachers College, appeared in the June issue of the Missouri pictorial rotogravure section of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The photographs showed the "moon-beam dance," with Frances Romus and Graham Malotte in the foreground, and the scene, "Cupid and the Goddess of Love," in which the following members of the College took part: Morrin Grooms, P. A. Sellers, Cecil Young, William Meek, McDonald Egdorf, Victor Mahood, Marion Guillems and Raymond Moore. The pictures were sent in by Garland N. White, local correspondent for the Post-Dispatch.

Chloe Compton, a former student of the College, will sail, June 15, from New York, for Europe. Miss Compton teaches in the schools of Omaha.

Helen Tobow, B. S., 1924, has been employed to teach English in the Hancock Place High School, of St. Louis, Mo.

Coffey-Miller Players to Be Here June 19

Players Will Present Three Plays in College Auditorium June Nineteenth and Twentieth.

The Coffey-Miller Players are to give three plays in the College Auditorium on June 19 and 20. The cast consists of Miss Martha Miller and Mr. Jess Coffey, leaders of the company, Clarence Westerland, Miner Coburn, Warrington Winters, Christine Hiney, Nello Childs, and Ernest Rockford. This group of players will present three plays "A Marriage of Convenience," "A Scrap of Paper," and "Mice and Men." Vignette sets will be used for the production of all the plays.

"A Marriage of Convenience" by Dumas, which will be presented the first evening, June 19, is a comedy which fits admirably with the Coffey-Miller repertoire. It affords Miss Martha Miller and Mr. Jess Coffey parts for which they are magnificently suited. The story, briefly, concerns the Comte de Candale who marries for convenience the beautiful daughter of General Torigny. The Comte cares little for his wife. The rather flat domestic relationship is further aggravated by the untimely appearance of an old suitor of the Comte's wife, the Chevalier de Valelos, but she explains to him that love between them now is impossible. But the Chevalier does not want to see it that way. In order to appease him, the Comtesse agrees to play upon the harpsichord, a love song, while he listens under her window. It is beneath his wife's window one evening that the Comte stumbles upon the love denied Chevalier. The Comte at once suspects infidelity. From now on the Comte makes life very miserable for the Chevalier and finally through a series of clever situations, he brings the whole matter to light. In the meantime, the Comtesse and Comte have become violently enamored of each other. General Torigny in order to insure their affection for each other hints at a divorce, and this suggestion only tends to bring man and wife in closer harmony and that, of course, is as the General wishes. Needless to say, the marriage of convenience turns out to be one of pure love.

"Scrap of Paper," by Sardou, which will be presented the second afternoon, is thought by many theatre-goers, to be the finest play they have ever seen. Well the Sardou play is by no means a piece of dramaturgy for the young playwright of today to follow. Nevertheless, we can agree with the old play-

President Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College and president of the National Education Association, has been appointed on the steering committee of nine which will outline the work of the commission called to Washington last week by Secretary of the Interior Roy Lyman Wilbur to study the relations between the United States government and education.

Mr. Lamkin returned to Maryville Sunday from the Eastern trip. He will return to Washington when the committee meets again October 14 and 15.

The conference, known as the "Wilbur conference" because it was called by the Secretary of the Interior, was attended by fifty nationally known men, mostly educators. There were fifty invited to the meeting and no one declined.

Of the five west of the Mississippi river invited to the conference, Mr. Lamkin was one. The commission was called by Secretary Wilbur for the purpose to study and report to the Secretary of the Interior, of the Bureau of Education as a department, and to President Hoover, on practically all of the phases in the relations between the federal government and the education forces of the Nation.

The commission was divided into three groups. The first, headed by Dr. James E. Russell, dean emeritus of the Teachers College, University of Columbia, will consider the organization of the educational agencies in government.

The group of which Frank Cody, superintendent of schools at Detroit, is chairman, will consider the subsidies to less than college grades. Institutions including the Smith-Hughes and vocational home economics departments in which the Maryville public schools are interested.

The third committee, of which L. D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota is chairman, will consider the subsidies to the schools of college ranking.

Besides the other four educators from west of the Mississippi river, represented at the conference, there were President Coffman, Miss Agnes Sam-

Faculty Is Host to Student Body

The faculty of the College will hold their annual reception for the students, Friday night, June 14, from 8 o'clock until 9.

The reception affords an excellent opportunity for the students to come into a closer contact with the faculty outside the classrooms. There are many new instructors on the faculty this summer and at this time an opportunity will be afforded the students and instructors to get acquainted and in this way know each other better. Mr. LaMar will introduce the guests to President Lamkin. Others in the receiving line will be, Mrs. Lamkin, Mr. and Mrs. Kinnaird and Miss Barnard.

Misses Bowman and Goodheart will be in charge of the punch table. Other members of the faculty will assist in the serving.

The College orchestra under the direction of Mr. H. O. Hickernell will furnish music throughout the evening. The lawn will be lighted with Japanese lanterns.

Mrs. Early, county superintendent of Worth County, is taking work here this summer.

Students Hear Talk on Bible In Assembly

Dr. Allen G. Wehrli Gives One of A Series of Biblical Lectures in College Assembly on Wednesday.

The regular College assembly for this week was held at 9:45 Wednesday morning, June 12, Reverend Burns read some passages from the Bible, from the seventh chapter of Matthew. President Lamkin introduced Dr. Ambrose G. Suhrie, of New York University, and designated the places where he was to lecture to the faculty and students during the day.

Mr. Lamkin also made some announcements and took a standing vote of the students regarding holidays July 4, and 5.

Dr. Allen G. Wehrli, of St. Louis, then addressed the assembly, on the subject, "Pitfalls of Perfection."

Dr. Wehrli began by saying that we have the story of Jesus coming upon the three fishermen, Peter, James, and John. They had been fishing all night and had caught nothing. Jesus came to them and told them to throw out the net on the right side of the boat, that there they would find an abundance of fish. Dr. Wehrli said that to these able fishermen this probably sounded just about as it would sound to a driver of an automobile if some one told him to drive down the left side of the street, or as it would sound to a farmer to tell him to milk a cow on the left side. He showed how that in order to be successful even in this day people sometimes have to follow paths of action which are not in harmony with the ordinary well beaten paths or rules of life.

Mr. Wehrli in sighting some of the outstanding incidents of Jesus' contacts with the people in his life on earth, gave the impression to the audience that if modern people are to have their lives count for the worth while things, they must not follow just the ordinary rules, customs or laws but must have faith where others lack it. They must go the extra mile and give not only with the hand but with a heart full of love and with the spirit of real sincere wishes for the welfare of the one to whom they give.

The speaker continued by telling how people of the time of Jesus thought that they were living christian lives just because they were following the old well established laws of Moses. While these laws were more than 1000 years old and were made to fit all of the troubles of man, Jesus in his contact with the people of his time showed them that they should be modified by Christian spirit.

Dr. Wehrli mentioned the rich young man whom Jesus told to sell everything he had, when the young man asked him what he should do. He told the story of the woman, guilty of adultery whom Jesus met at the well. He quoted the words of Jesus to the men who suggested that they carry out the law and stone her to death. Jesus said "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone." And to the woman he said "Go Thou and sin no more."

The speaker mentioned the divorce courts of today with all of their tragedy. He told the assembly of a judge whom he knew, who always tried to get those who were trying to get a divorce to reconsider, and try to preserve the home.

College Enrollment Now Past 900 Mark

The total enrollment of the College Wednesday, June 12, was 902 students. This number includes some 35 or 40 high school students. This is somewhat less than the enrollment of last year's summer session. At this time last year 1000 students were enrolled for the summer course.

Due to the bad weather conditions that have prevailed until recently many students have decided not to attend school. Many are on the farms helping put in the crops that have been delayed by the heavy rains. Others are delayed upon some other school probably because it was more convenient to reach at the time of the heavy rains that crippled railroad and transportation service.

Classes start at 7:00 each morning and run fifty-five minutes each period until 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

We will respect and obey the College laws and do our best to make a life of respect and reverence in others. We will transmit this College to those who come after us, greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

A Musical Afternoon
As the musicians make their appearance on the stage there is a hubbub of comment from the audience. The pompadour and triumphant mustache and air of the handsome violinist attract the fair romantic sex at first glance. The cellist is unfortunately fat and wears a black barbarous-looking beard, his appearance provoking those of lighter thought to snickers and convulsions. The gowns of the pianist and second violinist are suffered to a critical examination by the feminine members present. As one artist rises to announce the piece the audience settles itself to catch the sound. He names the number to be played, speaking in a slightly foreign accent, and the name is repeated around the audience.

As the music begins the newness of the situation holds the audience, and they are content to watch the maneuvers of the musicians. The pianist entertains some of the audience with her mannerisms or the marvelous speed of her fingers. The violinist uses any peculiar habits, such as lifting the shoulders, or a nervous twitch of the head, can easily cause some group somewhere to break out in hysterical gasps and chokings. The music lover sits in silent meditation letting himself go under the charm of the music, his heart at peace with the world, when, in the midst of his reverie breaks a "psst! psst!" from two aged spinsters nearby. Their whispers rise with the crescendo, becoming bolder and rising to a murmur, and then in the lull of the music dying down again. The sensitive listeners mood becomes morbid with the eternal "psst" in his ears. His heart is filled with murderous and malicious thoughts which wrench his soul. Peace is no longer for him. It may be true that "music hath power to soothe the savage breast," but he is beyond all comfort. He is divided between trying to listen to the music and choking the irritating disturbers. A mean look over his shoulder has no effect on them. They are senseless creatures, unmindful alike of any sight or sound except their own.

Let us turn from this painful scene to others in the audience blessed with the power of silence, at least. The music is now approaching the end, gradually rising and bursting into a grand, passionate climax. Someone yawns. In the rear of the auditorium a girl rises and a dozen necks crane toward her departing figure, everyone afraid of losing one detail of her appearance.

The music is now dying down and comes to a close, the last soft notes being played by the violin. It is over. For a moment the audience remains dumb and then comes to the realization that the music has stopped playing. They commence to applaud loudly. Everyone grubs for his wraps and prepares to leave. The following conversation may be heard, "Yes, so nice to be out—can't stay in the house." No one mentioned music although all had heard it.

Success or Failure

Will you be a success or a failure? In this day of progress, machinery, invention, trained minds, and splendid chances how many will be rich or self-supporting at sixty-five years of age? Perhaps statistics upon this subject will prove of interest to some. U. S. government figures show that out of every one hundred men who start out to earn a living at the age of twenty-five, there are six dead, thirty-seven just struggling along, thirty-seven barely earning a living, ten comfortably wealthy men, and ten rich men when they reach the age of thirty-five. Now, it is understood that this will not hold good in all instances but as a rule these figures are somewhere near the truth. Again when this hundred men reach the age of forty-five, there are only three wealthy men left of the ten and only one of the rich men remain. The dead has increased from four to sixteen leaving at least four out of the twenty rich and wealth at the age of thirty-five, who have lost their riches. Why they lost their money is, of course, a case for conjecture. Several things might have happened. One reason given for people losing their wealth is the lack of a foundation for knowing how to handle money. Another reason given is that the four unlucky ones might have gotten a little over confident and "splurged" into the melting pot of business a little too deeply. These two reasons for losing wealth after having gained it are very generally given.

Now the reader may ask, what has become of the two middle classes, those in poverty and those barely making a living. Fifteen are left of the thirty-seven in poverty and the amount of those barely making a living has mounted from thirty-seven to sixty-five.

To make a long story short we will hurry through the next twenty years by merely stating that the ranks stay about the same except that the number who were barely getting along decrease and the number of those in poverty and dead mounts upward.

The age of sixty-five, when the well preserved man is still going strong, is the age of reckoning. Thirty-six of the one hundred who started out with strong bodies and minds at the age of twenty-five are dead. What a pity when they should be living and in their prime. Disease has told its tale but greater than disease that king of all murderers, worry, has planted the sign of a tombstone upon the graves of his victims. Fifty-four of the one hundred are financial wrecks, living on the charity of the county, state, or their children. Five are barely making a living, and four are wealthy. The lonely one, rich man who was rich at the age of twenty-five and the only one to keep his riches throughout his entire life is still alive, rich and may be happy.

Here are the figures. Set down a moment with your pencil and paper and figure them out. Ninety of the one hundred who started out at the age of twenty-five are utter failures at the age of sixty-five. Only ten are still going and at least five of this ten must totter on, in order to live. No comforts for them. It is still the old grind from early morning to late at night. Only five out of the hundred learned the rules of the game, played it right.

Will you learn the rules of this game of life before you are twenty-five, so that you can play a successful hand?

Mrs. Mary Esther Murphy O'Banion, B. S., 1927, who taught in the Hopkins High School last year, has been employed to teach in the high school at Worth next year. She is writing insurance for the New York Life Insurance Company this summer.

Jessie, Z. Murphy, B. S., 1921, who is principal and instructor in teachers training in the Grant City, High school, was at the College Friday for a short time. She is working on her master's degree at Missouri University.

Mr. Wells has kindly reserved the balcony of the library for students of Child Psychology. All students taking this course may find reference books on the shelves on the balcony. Students should endeavor to keep the books in place.

Miss Dykes had as luncheon guests, last Friday, Dr. Frank R. Reade, of Georgia Polytechnic, Atlanta, Georgia; Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Ford; and Miss Lowell MacCafferty, of Chicago, who was the guest of her niece, Mrs. Ford.

Miss Eva Margaret Frank, a former S. T. C. student, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Frank. She returned Sunday evening to Columbia where she will attend summer school at Missouri University.

Over the Library Desk

The college library is striving to serve the student body and faculty to the best of its ability. Because of the increased enrollment more chairs and tables have been put into use. The books for reference reading in child psychology have been placed on the balcony. Students are asked to leave the balcony free for the use of those classes.

The library will be closed during the hours of Professor Wehrli's lectures. Interesting books for supplementary reading to those lectures may be found on the new book shelves. Here are the titles of a few of the books:

Gray: Critical Introduction to the Old Testament.
Eakin: Revaluing Scripture.
Knox: Knowing the Bible.
Booth: The Background of the Bible.
Driver: Introduction to the Literature of the Old Testament.

"Because of our admiration for his rare personal qualities and our appreciation of his services to his College, we, the members of the Tower staff, respectfully and gratefully dedicate the 1929 Tower to President Lamkin."

The foreword of the book says, "to give a glimpse of modern education as portrayed in our own life is the purpose of this 1929 Tower."

The book is divided into three main sections, the College athletics, and activities.

In the section, "the School," there are eight large full page pictures of favorite subjects of the buildings and campus. One, the new smokesack, another, the president's residence, the sundial, the gymnasium, Residence Hall, the grove, the silver birches, and the memorial posts.

The pictures of the board of regents, president and faculty are in the following section. Next comes the seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen.

The athletic section contains pictures of the football, basketball, tennis and track men. Also the pictures of women's athletics are shown, including the pictures of those who participated in hockey, soccer, volley ball, basketball, swimming, baseball, and tennis.

In the activities section there are pictures of the honorary fraternities, Tower staff, student council, Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., Residence Hall board, primary council, art club, social science club, library staff, Northwest Missourian staff, Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority, Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity, Hash Slinger's union, the "Growlers," and the Green and White Peppers.

A sub-section, "Talent," contains pictures of the debate squad, Men's Glee Club, Women's Glee Club, Writers club, Dramatic club, and senior plays.

BOOK REVIEWS

The first three reviews are by Joseph Auslander and were published in Lawriat's Book Review. Joseph Auslander is one of the younger American poets of distinction. He is the author of "Cyclops Eye" and "Sunrise Trumpets."

1. CAVENDER'S HOUSE. By Edwin Arlington Robinson. Macmillan. $2.

It is difficult to believe that the poet who, by the bonds of spiritual geography as well as calendar, belongs with yesterday's Yankee generation, is also one of our most contemporaneous and vital poets. When we consider Robinson's extraordinary prestige and his expanding popularity, we are apt to overlook the years of neglect and poverty; we are apt to forget that the author of "Tristram" published his first volume of poems in 1897, five years after Kipling's "Barrack Room Ballads" began its best-selling career; we are apt to divorce the unread poet of "The Children of the Night" and the somewhat less unread poet of "Captain Craig" and "The Town Down the River" from the suddenly famous creator of "The Man Against the Sky."

Ah well, so it goes. And here we have him in "Cavender's House," continuing his explorations into the tortured minds and souls of men, performing that same fastidious and shadowy surgery which he has always delighted in with its implications and its snares and its blind intentions and its heart-eating deadlocks and proud pitiful defeats. What he did with "Miniver Cheevy" and "Cliff Klingenhagen" and "Richard Cory" (terse ancestors of the "Spoon River" characters), with "Flammonde" and "Avon's Harvest" and "Roman Bartholow," he does again with "Cavender's House."

Strangely enough, there is in this latest study of a man's internal disintegration, very much the same mixture of fear and hate, the same silent drive of conscience, the same haunting sense of reality in cold moonlight, more real somehow for being slightly bewitched, as we feel and find in the best of his more sombre investigations. The actual details of the tragedy between Cavender and his wife are always implicit, often blurred, sometimes lost in the darkness of the impeachment and in that intense economic process which is Robinson's peculiar and perilous habit. But the poetry is never absent. It flashes under the astringent and steady lines like heat lightning with livid fringe: All through the house

He could hear silence like a multitude Of silences, and all apprised of him. There was a silence that was watching him, And there was one that listened like a spider, Hearing his thoughts, and holding them to toll To demons that would likely come for him. When they saw fit to come. He shivered, and a mist was on his forehead, Cold, as if death had touched him and withdrawn His touch unwillingly.

ANGELS' AND EARTHLY CREATURES. By Elinor Wylie. Knopf. $2.50. This is without question the best of Elinor Wylie's books, the fullest and richest, being the truest, of her contributions to our poetry. It is at once the testament of her mortality and the document of her immortality.

Never before, save in the flame that broke darkly and rarely through the scrupulous net, has she given so much of herself as a woman and a poet. The emotion of it had always been and could not help being, leashed and alert and elinched; but it is no longer kneaded in exquisite rhetoric or chained in silken euphuism. It speaks out, no less succinct, but for more simple and far more accessible. The allegory no longer blinds the reader with ambiguous glitter. The shield of dazzling parable dropped. The result is a loveliness of phrase, a freedom of statement that is, if anything, more terrible in its loveliness, more unendurable in its freedom.

"Angels and Earthly Creatures"—glorious title and incomparable definition of her dilemma—is not a fat volume, being essence and ardour. But whether it is "Chimera Sleeping," with its autobiographical indication, or that delicate sonnet of apology to the superb sequence:

Although these words are false, none shall prevail To prove them in translation less than true

Or overthrow their dignity, or undo the faith implicit in a fabulous tale The ashes of this error shall exhale Essential verity, and two by two Lovers devout and loyal shall renew. The legend, and refuse to let it fail. Even the bertayer and the fond deceived.

Having put off the body of this death, Shall testify with one remaining breath, From spulchres demand to be believed These words are true, although at intervals

The unfaithful clay contrive to make them false. or whether it is in the "Little Elegy" which shuts this book upon a fragrant chilled flower:

Withouten you
No rose can grow;
No leaf be green
If never seen
Your sweetest face;
No bird have grace
Or power to sing;
Or anything
Be kind, or fair,
And you nowhere.

Elinor Wylie, is by this, her final and, alas, posthumous declaration, assured of her indisputable place among the poets of all time.

THE PATE OF THE JURY. By Edgar Lee Masters. Appleton. $2.50. This long and thickly knitted narrative poem, in the garrulous tradition of Browning and Wordsworth, continues the business of "Domesday Book." Taking up the tragedy of Elinor Murray, the probing into her life and violent death finished, it deals with the reverberations after the inquest as they beat upon the coroner's soul and involve the seven men of the jury. It is in effect, a sequel and an expansion of what Masters intended in "Domesday Book" to be "a spiritual census of America."

The scheme of this new volume is, like its predecessor, rather heavy and artificial. It bristles with angles and altitudes, with perplexities and cross-currents and passions and dark insanities and darker sanities and intricate destinies. It really amounts to a series of monologues—or better, to one prodigious monologue—in the form of confessions by the several members of Elinor Murray's jury—confessions that will presumably shed light upon the meaning and direction of life. There is no denying occasional grandeur of expression, occasional vitality of characterization, occasional sublimity of insight. Masters is consumed with what we must applaud as a serious—perhaps too serious—purpose. He dares to be didactic. He declares himself under high moral auspices. He espouses the most ancient and the most accurate function of the poet—that of priest and prophet.

But while all this is honest and praiseworthy enough, it sinks under its own weight. It succumbs to an utterly humorless dead cargo of gravity. There is none of that flaming music, that livid revelation, that brilliantly caustic condensation, that harsh and infinitely compassionate catharsis which made those first monologues of "The Spoon River Anthology" so dramatically true, so lyrically memorable. One hungers for another "Pauline Barrett" or "Washington McNeely," another "Shack Dye" or even "Carl Hamblin"; most of all for those terrific affirmations, those colossal silhouettes of ecstasy and prophecy which burned "Ann Rutledge" and "Lucinda Matlock" and "Isaiah Beethoven" into the soul's core.

Ruby Goodwin, B. S., 1927, who has been teaching in the junior high school, Fort Madison, Iowa, has been employed to teach English in the high school at Harlan, Iowa, next year. She is attending the Colleg this summer.

Mrs. Rhoda K. Doolin, B. S. and B. A., 1923, of Gallatin, joined Miss Shepherd, of the College faculty, when she started to Europe and will travel this summer with her. They will attend a meeting of the World Federation of the Education Association to be held in Geneva, Switzerland. They attended a similar convention held in Toronto, Canada, two years ago.

Spalding School Is Monument to Jane Neil's Work

This School Helps Crippled Children to Help Themselves—Vocational Guidance is given.

Those who have followed the work of Jane Neil, for many years Principal of the Spalding School in Chicago, believe that the new Spalding School, with capacity for accommodating 1000 crippled children, is an excellent monument to her industry and imagination. And if anyone doubts the possibility of accomplishing practically every thing that needs to be done in helping the most severely crippled children to help themselves, he should visit the Spalding School and renew his faith.

Miss Neil has always maintained that spastic children are aided tremendously by special education and that much more can be done for them than laymen generally suppose. To this end she has provided every possible type of physical and occupational therapy as well as trained and experienced teachers for those that are below the average mentality.

An interesting feature of the work at Spalding is the grouping of the children according to their physical and mental handicaps. In this way they are working out their particular problems in conjunction with well organized social service department. At the same time they are taking up the question of prevocational guidance at an early age so as to consider their future in the light of their handicap. And even though they may not guide them vocationally at this early age, are considering every possible feature that may be of assistance in planning their future work.

Among the many interesting types of physical equipment which are provided for these children is an immense swimming pool where they are taught muscular control and self confidence. This is a feature that has been applied for many years now in the treatment of infantile paralysis cases, but one that is only now gaining wide recognition as of particular value in the treatment of spastic paralysis. The work has become so highly developed at Spalding and has been carried on in such a scientific manner, that they are gaining recognition both at home and abroad as pioneers in this connection. Such treatment has already been attempted in Missouri in a modest way and we firmly believe that it should be encouraged to a greater extent even if expensive equipment is out of the question.

Lucille Airy, B. S., 1925, who teaches commercial work in the Southside High School in Omaha, is at home in Maryville for the summer.

Mrs. Early, who is the superintendent of the Worth County schools, went home for the week-end to give teachers' examinations.

Librarians Are Entertained at Washington, D.C.

Mr. Wells and Miss Brumbaugh Go to Washington, D. C. to Attend Library Conference.

Mr. C. E. Wells and Miss Lucille Brumbaugh, who have charge of the College Library, attended the American Library Association's meeting which was held in Washington, D. C., the week of May 18 to 19. They reported that the meeting was a great success and were pleased with the delightful trip and instructive speeches and pleasant experiences which they enjoyed there, one of which was being in the group of delegates when President Hoover joined them to have his picture taken. They saw some wonderful exhibits of complete library equipment and a great many of the newest books, especially reference books.

While in Washington, D. C., they saw Harold Bellows whose wife is a daughter of Mr. J. R. Brink, of Maryville, who was formerly connected with the College. Mr. Bellows is president of the Bellows Publishing Co., which publishes the book of Rural Life, that is in the College Library.

Mr. Wells and Miss Brumbaugh visited Arlington, Mt. Vernon, both houses of Congress, and other places of interest to travelers in Washington, D. C. They were luncheon guests of Congressman David Hopkins of this Congressional district. Other guests at this luncheon were Miss Mary Reichert, of the Reference Library of St. Joseph; and Mr. I. R. Bundy, head of the St. Joseph Library.

Mr. Wells and Miss Brumbaugh report that they were delightfully entertained at the headquarters of the National Education Association. They attributed the fine hospitality shown them through this department to the fact that President Lamkin of the College is also president of the National Educational Association.

Mr. Jay Morgan, editor of the National Education Association Journal, took them for ride over the city and to visit Lincoln Memorial.

Mr. Wells and Miss Brumbaugh attended various group meetings and dinners as well as the regular program numbers. Miss Brumbaugh attended the all library school luncheon Thursday night, May 16, of the University of Illinois Library School of Urbana, Illinois. More than two hundred fifty of the graduates of this school were present at this dinner.

Mr. Wells and Miss Brumbaugh report that many of the librarians over the country, who attended the meeting, are taking their vacations at this time and will visit other places of interest over the country before returning to work.

During the meeting of the Association, two numbers of the Conference Chronicle, publications of the association were published. In these publications were printed the names of more than twenty-five hundred names of delegates who attended from five nations and forty-five states. This was the record for attendance at the association which has met 51 times. In these papers were published various pictures and speeches which were taken at the meeting. In one of the pictures Mr. Wells' picture appears with that of a group. In the same paper the picture of Mr. Eric Kelly, professor at Dartmouth College appears. Mr. Kelly won the Newberry award. The Conference Chronicle has the following to say concerning Mr. Kelly.

"The Trumpeter of Krakow," by Prof. Eric P. Kelly of Dartmouth College, won for this author the 1929 Newberry Medal awarded by the Children's Librarians' Section. Miss Carrie E. Scott, chairman, presented the medal, which is the gift of Frederick G. Melcher, of New York.

A medieval trumpet sent by the Polish government for the occasion was blown by Arthur Whitecomb, second leader of the U. S. Marine Band, as a part of the presentation ceremonies. Attached to the trumpet was a parchment scroll bearing the following inscription in Polish which states:

"The Archive Department of the City of Krakow hereby testifies that this trumpet has been used since immemorial times to sound the hymn from the tower of Our Lady Mary in Krakow."

"The trumpet is the property of the fire department of the city of Krakow. There are engraved on the trumpet names of trumpeters who have sounded the hymn from the Lady Mary Tower."

Professor Kelly, who teaches American literature and a course in Slavic backgrounds of literature at Dartmouth was formerly in newspaper work. In 1918 he was in relief work with the Polish legions of France and went with them back to Poland. In 1925 he was invited by the Kosciuszko Foundation to teach at the University of Krakow, Poland, and it was there that the story of The Trumpeter of Krakow grew out of the darkness of the Polish nights with the trumpet song, the Hymn, sounding each hour from the tower of the Church of Our Lady Mary.

Mr. Wells reported that a good deal was said about the promotion of county libraries. Many of the counties are establishing these libraries which deliver truck loads of books to the various smaller towns of the county, thus rendering modern library service to thousands of people. The Bookmobile, which is a miniature library on wheels, has been traveling through various states demonstrating this service. The Chronicle has the following to say concerning the Bookmobile:

THE BOOKMOBILE

(This head tells the story to librarians.)

The last time we heard of the bookmobile it was stuck in a ditch down south and was being pulled out by two brawny horses we were surprised therefore the other day to have our taxi swerve out of its path for a big blue obstacle on new york avenue what said we to our driver is that ah dunno said he but ahl find out foh you mam for the taxi drivers in washington are very polite so pretty soon he came back and said that man is bookmobile oh said we and said he it is being sponsored by the national association of book publishers, the american booksellers association, gaylord brothers, the h. r. hunting company, the h. w. wilson company and the r. r. bowker company for the taxi drivers in washington also have very good memories so we got out and the meter read thirty-five cents but we paid forty cents on account of having an expense account then we went over to see mr. brockman who runs the bookmobile and said why are you here and he said we want librarians to know the best and newest library tools we want you to meet mr. stewart and then mr. stewart said that the bookmobile was at the disposal of library commissions and librarians and especially librarians who are interested in county library campaigns and that it goes into apparently inaccessible spots in order to let country people actually see what it is they are being asked to vote for and gets stuck not the country people which would be bad grammar but the bookmobile as it did down south which isn't english either so then it was time to go to a meeting of the bibliographical society of america and we went

Mr. Wells is looking forward to the time when Nodaway County will establish a better library service for its people.

Miss White Is to Attend Conference

Miss Elizabeth White, of the education department of the College, will leave Maryville for Des Moines, Iowa, Thursday, June 13, to attend a regional conference of supervisors of rural schools of the Midwestern states. The conference will be held at Hotel Savary, June 14 and 15.

Participants in the conference will come from the District of Columbia and eleven States: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. They will include, besides the U. S. Commissioner of Education, other representatives from the Bureau of Education; Chief State education officers; the President of the Department of Rural Education, National Education Association; State and county rural school supervisory officials; presidents of and professors of education in teachers colleges; an elementary principal; and a county librarian.

The topics to be considered concern special types of assistance needed by beginning teachers; essentials of effective supervisory programs; educational needs of subnormal children in rural areas; duties of rural school principals; and contributions of teacher-preparing institutions, State departments of education, and county librarians to the solution of supervisory problems.

The forthcoming conference is the fifth regional supervisory conference called by the U. S. Bureau of Education. Preceding conferences were held in Nashville, Tennessee; Raleigh, North Carolina; New Orleans, Louisiana; and New York City. It is expected that the June, 1929, conference will point the way to an intensive attack upon the specific problems similar to those indicated above are urgently needed in the interests of equalization of educational opportunity for rural children.

Miss Dora B. Smith entertained at dinner Tuesday evening, June 11, at the Country Club, complimentary to Miss Helwig and Miss Hopkins, who are leaving soon. Guests were Miss Painter, Miss Schuttz, Miss Barnard, Miss Hudson, Miss Orel Helwig and the honor guests.

June Magazine Prints Article by Mr. Mehus

Journal of Education publishes article written by College Instructor on Education.

Mr. O. Myking Mehus, instructor in social science at the College, has an article in the June 3, number of the Journal of Education, a magazine published in Boston, Massachusetts.

The magazine is outstanding in that some of the leading educators of today, such as, John J. Tigert, former commissioner of education and J. L. Hosi, of Columbia University, and others are contributors.

Mr. Mehus was honored by being asked to contribute with several other authors and writer on the subject, "Are High Schools Sufficiently Democratic?"

The article is as follows: By O. MYKING MEHUS Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, Maryville.

We should like to be able to answer this question in the affirmative, but when we face the facts we are forced to give a negative answer. Democracy in our high schools must necessarily mean equality of educational opportunity. At the present time we do not have equal educational opportunities for all our children. In too many cases the mere accident of the geographical location of the child's place of birth determines whether or not he will be able to secure a high school education.

In the state of Missouri the State Teachers Association has made a thorough study of the inequalities of the ability to support high schools in the different sections of our state. This study shows that in the 56 school districts in Missouri which maintain first-class high school the assessed valuation per pupil in average daily attendance varies from more than $20,000 per pupil in average daily attendance to less than $700. This study further shows that 233 districts have an assessed valuation of more than $4,105 per student and 283 high school districts have less than this amount. If we take the twenty-two first-class high school districts that show the largest wealth per student in average daily attendance, we find that by levying the constitutional maximum for teachers' wages and incidental expense these districts could raise from $100 to $206 for each pupil in average daily attendance. This amount decreases until we find that there are sixty-one first-class high school districts which could raise with the maximum levy only from $7 to $20 for each pupil in average daily attendance.

The eighty-eight second-class high school districts show about the same variation. With the maximum levy eight of these districts would have less than $20 per pupil in average daily attendance, while ten would have more than $100 per pupil. A maximum levy would produce $176 per student for the wealthiest district and only $10.84 for the poorest district.

Practically the same conditions are found among the 216 districts maintaining third-class high schools. The maximum levy would produce less than $20 per pupil in thirteen districts, while the same levy would produce more than $100 in eighteen districts. The poorest district could produce only $9.35 per pupil, while the wealthiest district could produce $258 with the same levy.

These differences in financial abilities lead naturally to differences in educational opportunities. One county with an assessed valuation of $1,857 per inhabitant has sixty students enrolled in high school for each 1,000 persons living in the county, while another county with an assessed valuation of $511 per inhabitant has only ten students enrolled in high school for each 1,000 persons living in the county. Does this mean democracy?

Today we are realizing as never before that education is no longer a local community affair, but that the education of the youth of the land is a state responsibility. Today we know that a child who has been brought up in a community too poor to give it adequate educational opportunities may leave that community later and become a liability or a menace to some other community. Therefore in order to safeguard every community of our country we must insist on equal educational opportunities.

Unfortunately the inequalities found in Missouri can be duplicated in every state of the Union. When only one-half of the young people of high school age are found in our high schools we must realize that our high schools are not sufficiently democratic. Possibly this is partly due to the antiquated and obsolete college preparatory course yet to be found in so many of our high schools, but most certainly a large percentage of young people are not attending high school because of the lack of adequate educational opportunities.

We have wealth enough in our country to give every boy and girl a high school education. Our high schools cannot be said to be thoroughly democratic until that ideal is reached.

Fire—Baseball

Things got a bit warm at the Administration Building Wednesday afternoon, but to the disappointment of certain nervous persons and to the embarrassment of others, nothing burned down. Without much imagination we rather believe that many had that burning sensation of chagrin, when without due deliberation they prepared to see a fire and fight a fire but there was no fire.

Miss Franken, without proper psychological analysis of the situation rushed to the telephone for specific details. Mr. Somerville lost his dignity in a wild scramble down the stairs with a bucket of water to quench that fire! Mr. Phillips, though quite anxious for all concerned maintained his equilibrium. (Quite exasperating to have a fire and not be able to attend because of duties elsewhere, isn't it?)

And all this, just because of a bit of advertising. The city authorities had loaned the fire truck to the Omaha baseball team for their taxi to the ball grounds at the College.

The game, which opened at three o'clock, proved to be full of thrills for the thousands and fans who scrambled for seats in the grandstand. Both teams accredited themselves very well in their playing and the future looks bright for the Maryville team. In spite of their losing the game to Omaha, the home team showed some fast work in getting the ball around the diamond and promise to do better in the future.

The final score was: Omaha Fire Department, five; Maryville, three.

Misses Anna Gorsuch, Edith Reynolds, Alice and Bertha Nelson spent last week-end at their homes in Guilford.

Life History of Instructors Is Published

The Northwest Missourian Plans to Start A Brief Record of The Lives of The College Teachers.

The Northwest Missourian plans to tell the College and community something of the lives of the instructors in the College, and perhaps something of the life history of several of the students enrolled. It is thought that this will prove interesting to both instructors and students, and may even help students form a guidance standpoint to make decisions in planning their careers. Some of the students attending school this Summer have also attended other schools and traveled in several states. This should be of interest it is thought to both the instructors of these students and others in the College.

It is planned to start a brief record of the lives of the instructors of the College. A start has been made in the department of commerce and business administration of which department, Mr. E. W. Mounce has recently been appointed chairman. At our request Mr. Mounce gives the following bit of life history.

Mr. E. W. Mounce, was born at Fredericktown, Missouri. His high school work was taken in the Academy of Marvin College, Fredericktown, Missouri. He was a student in Marvin College during the school year 1914-1915; and at Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee, during the school year 1915-16. He graduated from Marvin College, Junior College, in 1917. Joined the U. S. Navy in 1917. He graduated from the Business Department, Marvin College, May 1919. He entered the University of Missouri in Sept. 1919. Graduated from the School of Business Administration in 1921 with the degree of B. S. in Business Administration. He was also granted an A. B. degree of B. S. in Arts and Science. Entered the graduate school and took the degree of Master of Arts in Political Science and History, in 1922. Took further graduate work on Ph. D. degree that summer. In Sept., 1922, he went to William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo. as Professor of History and Political Science and remained there until 1925. During the summer of 1923 he taught Government at the State Teachers College, Warrensburg, Mo. During the school year 1925-26 he was Professor of Political Science at the University of Redlands, Redlands, California. In September 1926 he entered the law school at the University of Missouri and remained there for two years, spending the summers in the law school at the University of Kansas. While studying at the University of Missouri he gave courses in Government College. During the last five weeks of this summer session he expects to enter the Law School at the University of Kansas and complete the work on his degree of L. L. B.

Last September he came to the State Teachers College as a member of the Social Science Department. At the beginning of the Summer Session he was made Chairman of the Department of Commerce and Business Administration.

During his earlier years he taught one term in the rural schools of Madison County and one year in the Public Schools at Elvins, Missouri. He was admitted to the Bar in Missouri during the spring of 1929. He is a member of the Pi Gamma Mu, Pi Kappa Delta, and the American Association of University Professors.

Mr. G. H. Parker, an instructor in the Department of Commerce for the summer session is a native Missourian. He was born at Steffenville, Missouri where he had his elementary and high school training. He is a graduate of the Chillicothe Business College and has attended the State Teachers College at Kirksville, Missouri and the Sioux Falls College at Sioux Falls, South Dakota. He has his B. S. degree from the Northern State Teachers College at Aberdeen South Dakota, and has done graduate work at the University of Iowa. Mr. Parker's teaching experience began with rural school teaching and he has progressed through the elementary school, high school, and college. At present he is head of the Commercial Department of the Washington High School of Sioux Falls, South Dakota and is also employed as an instructor in the Extension Department of Sioux Falls College.

In addition to his chosen profession, Mr. Parker has had a considerable amount of business experience including sales and managerial positions. He was for a time special solicitor for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company and for a time was assistant cashier of the Corsica State at Corsica, South Dakota. Mr. Parker is president of the South Dakota Commercial Teachers Association, is a member of the Baptist church and a Royal Arch Mason.

Miss Myrtle O. Boatman, instructor of shorthand and typewriting, at the College received her elementary and secondary schooling in Mercer and Grundy Counties, Missouri. She attended the Northeast Missouri Missouri State Teachers College, and taught in the rural and grade schools of Missouri.

In 1918, she went to Gen City Business College, Quincy, Illinois where she was graduated with a Bachelor of Accounts degree. She then went as an accountant to Washington, D. C., but after two years, resigned to go into the United States Veterans' Bureau as a commercial teacher.

Later she went to Colorado State Teachers College, and finished her work for the Bachelor of Arts degree. After receiving the degree, she was appointed head of the Commercial Department in Garfield County High School, New Castle, Colorado, where she remained three years. Last year, she returned to Colorado State Teachers College to complete the work for the Master of Arts degree. She was granted the degree June 1929.

Faculty Asks Student to Help The faculty of the College is making an effort to help the student body get the most out of their College work this Summer and also to provide them with wholesome entertainment and some good times. They will appreciate the pep and enthusiasm and help on the part of the students in putting across the program which is under way.

Regents Meet

Maryville, who resigned this spring to go into public utility work.

Mr. Mounce has his B. S. degree and an M. A. degree and this spring passed the Missouri bar examination. Other members of the faculty elected were:

Stephna G. LaMar, director of information, who is in the position at present.

Miss Elenora Winfrey has been elected as social director of Residence Hall to succeed Mrs. Mary E. Gardner, effective September 1. Miss Winfrey has been dean of women and dean of the college at William Woods, Fulton. She has her B. S. degree from the University of Missouri, took graduate work at the University of Chicago and received her Master's degree from Columbia University, New York.

Mr. Lamkin announced that a change had been made in the library and text book deposit which the students pay. The change will not affect the summer students but become effective with the beginning of the fall term.

Beginning with the Fall term September 1929 the students will make the book deposit of $5.00 as usual, and if the deposit is left in the hands of the College for 12 months or for the length of time which a student desires, there will be only $1.00 deducted when the fee is returned. But if a student withdraws his fee at the end of a term he will receive $4.00 and for the next term when he makes his book deposit again he will have to make the usual $5.00 deposit. Thus it will cost the student one dollar to withdraw and redeposit his book fee. It is thought that this regulation will save time and trouble for the College. (Forum)

Science Finds Method to Make Food from Wood

Prof. G. S. Perry Announces That A Way Has Been Found for Mankind to Nourish Itself on Waste Wood.

"Man must learn how to eat the stalk as well as the grain, as cows and horses do," said Dr. Fritz Haber, eminent German chemist, when he visited Philadelphia for the centenary of the Franklin Institute.

The chemist, explained Dr. Haber, must find ways to treat stalks, leaves and twigs that many kinds of domestic animals can digest, and human beings cannot, as to make such vegetable substances digestible by man. That chemical discovery, he asserted, would protect mankind from famines threatened by the rapid increase of the world's population, through increasing available sources of food supply.

Now a way has been found for mankind to nourish itself on waste wood, announces Prof. George S. Perry of the Pennsylvania State Forest School in a "Service Letter" just issued by the Pennsylvania department of forests and water.

Men are not yet going to breakfast on shavings nor lunch on sawdust, explains Professor Perry. Their eating wood is to be by proxy.

What has happened is that Prof. Friedrich Bergius, celebrated German chemist has found a way to make a sugar out of wood waste. This sugar is of the same constitution as cane sugar, but is not sweet. Professor Bergius does not propose its use by mankind directly—but that it be fed to animals. Already it has been proved especially excellent as a food for swine.

So what the Germans have discovered is a way for man to eat waste wood by the roundabout method of first feeding it to pigs and so changing it into bacon, hams and lard.

It has long been known that sugars could be produced from wood. Wood is composed mostly of lignins and cellulose. By using hydrochloric acid it long has been possible to separate the cellulose and the lignins, and then convert the lignins into sugars. Heretofore, however, no satisfactory method has been known to get all the acid out of the sugar and thus render it fit for animal food. Now Professor Bergius has turned the trick by treatment of the wood sugars with oil of tar.

To be economically successful, says Professor Perry, a factory for making this wood sugar must have an output of at least 20,000 tons a year, which means using up about 17,000 cords of wood annually as raw material. A plant of this capacity is planned to be built at Stettin, in North Germany. Wood of the poorest quality, and even sawdust, can be used. But solid beechwood has been found most productive of sugar, yielding about 60 per cent thereof.

"The manufacture of wood sugar ought to be more feasible in the Eastern United States than in Germany," says Professor Perry. "Here the raw material is virtually without value and goes begging for a market, whereas in Germany even the poorest fagots are salable."

"It will be just another marvel of science if the magic of chemistry can transform ugly, crude and worthless forest waste into juicy steaks and crisp bacon, to tempt the palate of an epicure."

Violette E. Hunter Returns from Trip

Violette Hunter, president of Y. W. C. A., of the College returned Wednesday, June 12, from Hollister where she spent a few days in a joint summer conference of the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. leaders from colleges and universities in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Missouri. Nearly four hundred students enrolled in the camp at Hollister this summer for a ten-day vacation period of work and study, as well as play. The subjects discussed at the conference ranged from religion and world relationships to industrial and social problems of the day. Outdoor recreation and a wide range of sports and group activities played an important role in the conference programs. Excursions were made into "The Shepherd of the Hills" country and other points of interest in Southern Missouri and Northern Arkansas. Swimming, boating, and fishing on White River also added to the attractions of camp life.

Mr. Frank Buchtel, B. S. 1927, Emporia State Teachers College, Emporia, Kansas, is in school at the College this summer taking some special work in science with Dr. Hake. Mr. Buchtel, whose home is at Coia, Iowa, has been a teacher and coach of athletics in the high school at Princeton, for the past two years.

Erimil Coler, B. S., 1925, was at the College a short time last week. He is connected with the Banker's Life Insurance Company of Denver, Colorado. He said that W. K. Swisher, a former student of the college, is now with the same company. His headquarters are at Grand Junction, Colorado. Mr. Swisher has been superintendent of schools at Merceer.

Graduate's Diary Shows Many Trials

March 1—I sent out applications today.

March 15—I sent out more applications.

April 1—No replies from applications yet and I'm just beginning to wonder if I know enough to teach school.

April 15—My first reply from applications reads as follows: "Vacancy filled." I felt blue at first, but then I have five more to hear from.

May 1—Second reply from applications: "ditto" the first, but I haven't lost heart yet. It will surely seem funny not to be at old S. T. C. next year.

May 5—No more news from applications, and "no news is good news." Wonder where I'll be teaching next year.

May 6—Received two more "vacancies filled." I wrote home tonight to see if I can't get a job in the restaurant this summer.

May 15—Am rushed to death attending picnics, banquets, writing term themes and making notebooks. Got a letter from home today and the restaurant job is being held for me.

May 20—Got a letter from one of the places where I applied asking me to "fill out the enclosed blanks and return." That looks hopeful; I believe I'll really sleep tonight.

May 21—The same old "vacancy filled" story from the one remaining application; but I'm not worrying after he letter yesterday. They are thinking pretty seriously about you when they send you those regular applications blanks; have just been thinking perhaps I shouldn't take that job this summer; I ought to rest up for teaching next fall.

May 24—I rush from picnics to banquets these days and alternate between winners and roast veal. I got a letter from the registrar today and I thought sure he had found something that I hadn't taken and was informing me that my attendance at summer school was requested. I was relieved to find that I had just forgotten to pay my diploma fee.

May 27—One of the girls dropped in tonight and she was worrying herself sick because she hasn't a job yet. I cheered her up—I'm glad I've practically got one.

May 28—(business of grinding teeth and tearing hair) Well, it came—picture and all—"vacancy filled." Say, who's getting all these jobs?

May 29—Sent out more applications today, also wrote home to ask, in case I do well in the restaurant this summer, if there might be a chance of staying on for a year. Thank goodness people have to eat.

Seniors Bid Farewell to the College

Class Day Exercises for Seniors of 1929 Were Held at Seven O'clock, May 27.

The Class Day exercises which are given each year by the seniors were held May 27. The seniors in academic dress met at 7 o'clock in front of the Administration building.

The program, as announced by Roy Lester, consisted first of the planting of the tree. Leon Ungles, president of the student council, had charge of the exercises. Next the seniors bade farewell to Residence Hall, Ruth England to the Gymnasium, and Chilton Ross to the silver birches which are so well known to all the students.

The last part of the program was held at the Administration building. Paschal Monk, president of the senior class, presented the cane to the junior class and Evelyn Evans, junior president, accepted it. C. K. Thompson presented the class gift, which was accepted by President Lamkin in behalf of the College. The class is giving an original painting.

Wiley Polson bade farewell to the Administration building and then President Lamkin gave a farewell address to the seniors.

In a few words President Lamkin told the class that he was proud of them and their work. He mentioned a few outstanding activities which the College had sponsored this year such as the May Pete, the opera, Faust, and the senior play, in which the students had an opportunity to participate. Mr. Lamkin said in closing his farewell to the class of '29 that just as the directors of these major activities of the College were deeply interested in the students doing their very best when they appeared in a part in these college activities so was he and other members of the College faculty just as interested and anxious that the students who were leaving College go forth into their work of life and do their very best, keeping in mind the betterment of humanity and civilization.

During the program the class sang songs to other classes in the College and songs about the sister colleges. The program was closed by the singing of the Alma Mater.

Do You Stop and Observe?

How many of us really stop and observe? Too many of us fill our minds with facts about which we never think. We study Latin, French, English, and Drama, without even realizing the beauty of what we read.

After all life has no beautiful messages for those who are heedless and inattentive. Beauty must be sought after, for beauty won't seek you. Have not all the great men achieved their greatness through observation? Newton saw the planets revolve and made his name renowned. Watt heard the movement of steam and he harnessed it to a machine. The great French painter, Millet, saw a farmer silhouetted against the sky and he painted, "The Man With a Hoe."

If we would only follow the examples set by these famous men, how much more enjoyable our school work would be. Too many are satisfied and contented with what little they know of the finer sides of life.

Ke Kumukula

Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Dildine and daughter, Mrs. Ellen, returned Tuesday from Green Castle, Indiana, where they had gone to see their son, Glenn C. Dildine, receive his A. B. degree from De Pauw University. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Dildine's sister, Mrs. Hamman, and nephew, Bernard Hamman.

Homer Richmond, of Grant City, enrolled last Monday for the summer quarter. Mr. Richmond taught social science in the high school in Hubbard, Ohio, this year and he will teach there again next year. He was formerly a member of the student council and editor of the 1928 "Tower."

The Stroller

By I I I I

Something must be done to ease the mental pressure of the students of our school. It is hot, and oh so hot! while the stroller is pecking on this type-writer the prospiration gently runs in a crooked stream from his brow and drops off with a spatter on to the cement floor below. This hot weather makes one think of swimming in some cool pool, where one can thoroughly enjoy himself. By the way, that makes him think of the two Scotchmen who bet each other a Coco Cola that they could stay under the water longer than the other. They are still hunting for the poor fellows.

Since the Scotchmen are always getting the blame for something we might as well tell a few more on them. Someone told one the other day, about how the Scotchmen take the census in their country. The census taker rolls a nickel down the street and counts the population as they run after it. (Believe it or not)

Someone told another one on the Scotch. It was something like this: Christmas may mean a great deal to some merchants, but it's just another day in the week to the owners of gift shops in Scotland.

While we are rambling along and talking about various subjects what do you think of the sentence in the Constitution, "All men are created equal"? If this is true what about some of us. Look at Bill Meek and again Carl Massie, were they created equal? There is something to think about!

While we are thinking of the "created equal" question, what about the freedom of speech in our country? If there is such a thing as freedom of speech, the stroller should have the right to say things about the students of S. T. C. shouldn't he. The Stroller knows there will be no hard feelings shown by anyone who happens to get a joke cracked about him. Remember it is all in a spirit of lessening the tension created by studies and hot weather.

Here is one we can pull on Ora "Red" Mullenax.

Central: Number please?
"Red": Number? Woman, I put in my nickel and I want my chewing gum!

We heard a good one on Marzella Clary. Here it is. "Shorty" Houghton: (Calling up Marzella) Hello, dear, would you like to have dinner with me tonight?

Marsie: "I'd love to."

Shorty: "Well, tell your mother I'll be over early."

The Stroller knew that the College had two Sun dials, but did not know that one could read them by the moonlight, until he saw Clarence Worley and a friend coming from the dial near Mr. Lamkin's home last Sunday night. It is quite evident now that their eyes are bright. They said it was only ten o'clock, but according to the calendar, there was a new moon Sunday night. For fear the romantic Sun dial be broken, the Stroller advises the astronomy students and students of Miss Barnard's Freshman problems class to carry a watch, especially at night, rather than be found reckoning the nocturnal hours by the Sun dial, in the dark of the Moon.

Coffey Miller

goers that "A Serp of Paper" despite its antiquity remains a good afternoon's entertainment. This play is representative of the "Puritzer Prize Play" of the eighties. The presentation here, therefore, will be for many an historical adventure, to others it will re-enlive memories of Warren, Jefferson, and other historical characters. The Coffey-Miller players will present this comedy in modern dress rather than in the erinolines. All the 'asides,' 'soliloquies' and posture of the acting of a by-gone day is retained. The action may now and then stop, and the actor step forward either to tell the audience something that just he and they should know to express his thoughts; then he will return to the picture and the play will proceed. There is fine amusement in all this.

"Mice and Men," by Madeleine Lucette Ryley, will be played the second evening, June 20. This play is commented on by the Saturday Review in this way, "Mice and Men" is delightful, and rare among plays. But the chief ingredient of its delightful rarity is that it is a fairy story conceived in a sincere spirit—a fairy story in which one can believe. Mrs. Ryley, the author, has a genuine talent for sentimental comedy. A sense of humor has not been denied her. It prevents her from becoming maudlin. What a relief this play is, after the illiterate slush to which we have so long been accustomed to find dialogue that is really like human speech, yet terser and more distinguished than human speech." The Coffey-Miller players give and adequate and effective production. Miss Martha Miller and Mr. Jess Coffey have never been seen to better advantage. Miss Miller's Miller's "Peggy" is a delightful and charming creation. Mr. Coffey as "Mark Embury," is just as delightful and convincing, in a characterization both lovable and profound.

The Coffey-Miller Players will come to the College to give the major entertainment for the Summer school session.

Students are asked to tell their parents and friends about the plays, in order that the people of this section of the country may take advantage of the opportunity to see them.
